ACRL/NY New Librarians Discussion Group

invites you to attend a free session on publishing in librarianship

Friday, December 12, 2008
1:00pm - 4:00pm

At Long Island University, Brooklyn Campus

Publish or Perish? Librarian Publishing – Past, Present and Future

Most academic librarians are encouraged, if not required, to publish. And tenure requirements can be vastly different from institution to institution. How does publishing, or the pressure to publish, affect our roles, our professional lives, and our ability to succeed?

This session will focus on traditional and non-traditional publishing for academic librarians. Speakers, from local institutions, will present on the history of publishing for librarians, publishing in areas outside of LIS, and publishing alternatives. We will also provide ideas on how to stay in touch with what’s going on in the publishing arena, and tips on developing a professional portfolio. An informal question and answer session will follow.

This session is open to all librarians (new and well-seasoned) and to library school students. Please come and discuss your questions, ideas and concerns with the group. A light snack will be provided.

When and Where: | RSVP:
--- | ---
Friday, December 12, 2008 | by Wednesday, December 10th
1:00 PM - 4:00 PM | to Mari Miller-Lamb

Long Island University
1 University Plaza
Library
LLC 523
Brooklyn, NY 10458
http://www.brooklyn.liu.edu/library/index.html

Directions:
http://www.brooklyn.liu.edu/library/about/direct.htm

Please include “Publishing Presentation” in your subject line when RSVP’ing.